

Supplementary Material

Fear No Colors? Eurasian Tree Sparrows are More Wary of People Dressed in Red

Zhipeng Xu¹, Bin Li², Hui Yang², Jianping Liu^{2*} and Xingfu Yan^{2*}

¹Forestry Survey and Planning Institute of Ningxia Hui Autonomous Region

²College of Biological Sciences and Engineering, North Minzu University, Yinchuan 750021, China

Bin Li and Zhipeng Xu contributed equally to this work.

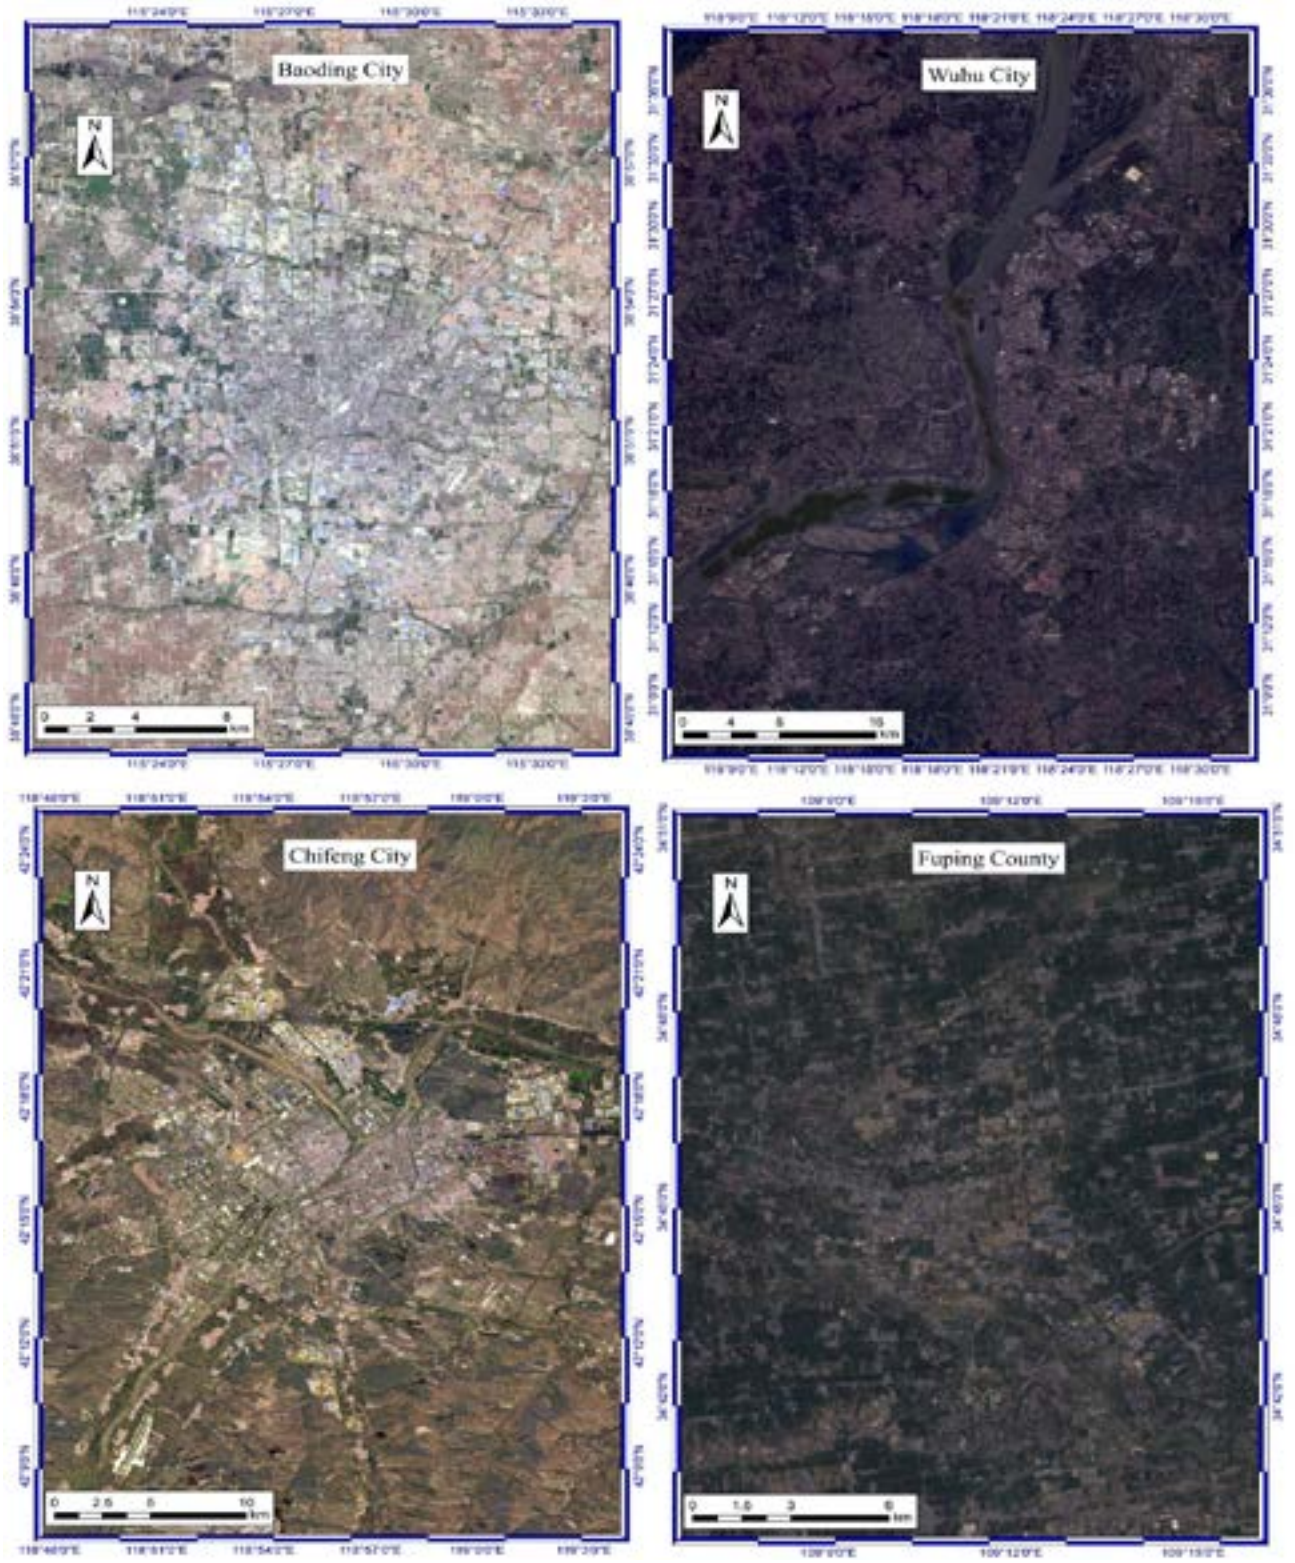

Supplementary Fig. 1. Four study areas in this study.

* Corresponding author: liujp@nwnu.edu.cn, xxffyan@126.com
0030-9923/2025/0005-2367 $ 9.00/00

Copyright 2025 by the authors. Licensee Zoological Society of Pakistan.

This article is an open access  article distributed under the terms and conditions of the Creative Commons Attribution (CC BY) license (<https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0/>).

Supplementary Fig. 2. Aerial photos of four cities. The green and dark green areas in the picture represent the green plants grown here, while the other color areas are mainly buildings, roads and rivers.

Supplementary Fig. 3. The four different colours of clothing used in this study: red (A), dark green (B), black (C), and white (D).